You can help us to promote excellence in health professions regulation

The Council for Healthcare Regulatory Excellence is an independent body accountable to Parliament. Our primary purpose is to promote the health, safety and well-being of patients and other members of the public. We scrutinise and oversee the health professions regulators, working with them in identifying and promoting good practice in regulation, carrying out research, developing policy and giving advice.

The purpose of the nine regulators is to protect and promote the safety of the public by:

- setting standards of behaviour, education and ethics for health professionals;
- maintaining a register of health professionals who are fit to practise in the UK;
- dealing with concerns about those who are unfit to practise as a result of poor health, misconduct or poor performance. They can remove professionals from the register and prevent them from practising where they consider this is in the best interests of public safety.

Members of our public stakeholder network can work with us in any of the ways outlined below. You can join our network by clicking the 'keep in touch' button on the homepage of our website (www.chre.org.uk), or by completing and returning the tear-away slip in this leaflet.

1. Respond to our consultations:

for information on our current consultations, please check our website: www.chre.org.uk, or call us on 020 7389 8030, asking for a printed copy to be posted to you.

2. Help us to be clear and friendly in all our communications:

- we invite network members to review our communications once a year in order to make them more accessible;
- we will publish your recommendations and our communications action plan on our website.

3. Attend our public meetings and events:

you can attend our Council meetings, conferences, road-shows and seminars; by participating in these events you can make sure your views on health professions regulation are heard.

What are the benefits of belonging to our public stakeholder network?

- you can help us to promote excellence in the way health professionals are regulated;
- we will give you the necessary training and support;
- as a member, we will inform you of our public consultations, meetings and events in advance;
- we pay reasonable travel expenses to attend meetings and events if you are self financing or unemployed.
